We are hardly prepared to credit the rumor that the rebels have retired to the South of the Cooss river, which we received by telegraph night before last. If it be true, it doubtless means a concentration in Jont of Richmond, with a view to offensive movements upon Washington. Desperate diseases require desperate remedies.

Voluntary Enlistment in Rebeldom-Enthusiasm in the Cause.

If there is one subject upon which the Copperhead press peculiarly delight to dwell, it is upon the unity of sentiment existing in the South; the determination of the people never to be subdued; and the "alacrity", with which they enter the field, in obedience to the demand of the Richmond leaders. We have read columns upon this subject in such papers as the Cincinnati Enquirer, the Chicago Times, and the New York News; and we have seen these columns re-echoed by the small fry newspapers throughout the country, with all the flourish which startling head lines can
